KEY PROJECTS

- Analysis of large-scale structures around planet-forming disks in DECO
2024-present
I am leading the analysis of large-scale (≥ 500 au) gaseous structures connected to planet-forming disks, as observed in ALMA Large Program DECO (Disk-Exoplanet C/Onnection, PI: L. Ilseidore Cleeves).
- Development of TIPSy, a code to analyse streamer observations
Second Ph.D. project at ESO, Germany with Dr. Anna Miotello; 2022-2023
I developed the first of its kind code to fit molecular-line observations of elongated trails of infalling gas, often called streamers, with theoretically expected trajectories of infalling gas.
- Using reflection nebulae to identify Class II sources undergoing late infall
First Ph.D. project at ESO, Germany with Dr. Anna Miotello; 2021-2022
I demonstrated that association with reflection nebulae can be used to identify Class II sources accreting material from surrounding clouds, which further suggests that a significant fraction of Class II sources could be undergoing this phenomena.
- Studying interplay between molecular clouds and young stars in Rho Ophiuchus
Master's thesis at National Central University, Taiwan with Prof. Dr. Chen, Wen-Ping; 2019-2021
I diagnosed the spatial and kinematic distribution of the young stellar population with respect to the deepest JCMT continuum emission map in the core of Rho Oph cloud complex.
- Investigating effects of magnetic fields on gas kinematics in protostars
Academia Sinica Institute of Astronomy and Astrophysics (ASIAA), Taiwan internship with Dr. Yen, Hsi-Wei; 2020-2021
Using data from JCMT and SMA, I investigated correlations between magnetic field orientations/strengths and gas kinematics for a sample of ~ 50 protostars in Perseus molecular clouds.
- Pipeline for detection and analysis of stellar flares
Internship at Aryabhata Research Institute of Observational Sciences (ARIES), India with Dr. Jeewan Pandey; 2018
I developed a pipeline to detect and analyze flaring signatures in Kepler's lightcurves.
- Fourier analysis of RR Lyrae variable stars
ARIES summer internship with Dr. Sneha Lata; 2017
I developed a program to analyse time series data of RR Lyrae Variables and estimate their physical parameters.
- Development of sugar-based additive manufacturing machine
Bachelor's research project at IIITDMJ, India with Prof. Puneet Tandon; 2016
I assisted in the design and fabrication of a machine for 3D printing objects out of pure sugar.
